“it will be a great day when our schools get the money they need & the air force has to hold a bake sale to buy a bomber.”

Solar baking demonstration, video and presentation by Keith McHenry

Food Not Bombs co-founder Keith McHenry will speak about this life changing movement, demonstrate how to prepare solar baked goods while giving a presentation about the history, principles and Food Not Bombs global campaign for the change we knead now! Volunteers recover, prepare and share vegan meals and groceries in nearly 1,000 communities, feeding the hungry, and supporting nonviolent direct action in resistance to the global economic, political and environmental crisis while implementing a foundation for a sustainable future. Tax payers have spent trillions to bail out the banks and fund wars for corporate domination, now it's time to bail out our communities.

Food Not Bombs started in 1980 when eight college aged activists dressed as generals and started holding bake sales pretending to buy a bomber. Thirty years later Food Not Bombs organized a two month long vigil outside the White House, baking bread in a solar oven to build popular support for a conversion from a carbon based war economy to a sustainable solar future. Now you can join this life changing movement!
